Technical characteristics

Devon, named after the county in southwest England, evokes the wild yet domesticated nature of its English designer. A very attractive piece in enamelled stoneware, by turns a watering can and a flowerpot, it is a technical feat which is characterized by the highly graphic nature of its pouring spout. The choice of stoneware, fired at more than 900 degrees, produces a strong material which can be kept in the garden. Watering can / flowerpot in moulded matt-finish terracotta-enamelled stoneware.
